Among the Farmers
Tuber Unit Seed Plots.
(By G. C. Larrabee.)
The importance of producing seed potatoes carrying no tubercles of disease has been a question of the utmost importance.
Not but a few years ago it was generally conceded that any farmer who changed his seed after a few years' planting of his seed, as he thought, would run the risk of introducing the disease into his soil and would not produce as many barrels per acre. To strengthen this belief, we had numerous instances where a farmer would secure seed from another part of the town or state, naturally getting seed from a field that had yielded well and practically always would secure the desired result.
If we acquire ourselves with potato diseases and examine closely a potato field carrying any disease at all, we can readily see that a diseased field is a low producing individual and certainly not desirable. We also know that a field carrying a large percentage of disease is never a high yielding acreage and, without doubt, the natural inclination of disease has for years been the cause of the so-called "running out."
The importance of knowledge of potato diseases become common to all at once a solution offered to overcome this difficulty that had been taken for granted so long.

Yields of Sweet Corn
(By G. C. Larrabee.)
The older method of breeding corn have in most respects been unsatisfactory in increasing yields. About twenty years ago a great emphasis was placed on selecting seed corn according to a certain show standard. Ears were selected on the basis of uniformity, number of ears per cob, and the size of the ears. Experiments conducted in many parts of the country with both field and sweet corn have shown that a little or no relation between the appearance of an ear and the yield and quality of the resulting plant. The reason why there is so little relation between the appearance of an ear and its performance is because the plant is the cause much of the variation in ear size, number, and quality, and because the ear is the result of the plant's growth and development.

With What You Have
Waiting for a certain sum before opening a savings account often means indefinite postponement. Start with what you have now and add to it as you can. Most savings accounts have been built that way. When you actually possess a pass-book with an entry in it, you will be much more interested in adding to it.

How to Market Poultry
(By O. M. Wilbur.)
The amount of profit realized for any poultry product is equal to the difference between the cost of producing it and the amount received for it. The cost of production is the principal factor in determining the profit. The cost of production is the principal factor in determining the profit. Spring Soups and Spring Salads.

It is a little remark that with the coming of spring, when the stimulus of cold weather is removed, our flagging appetites need the spur of something different, more delicate, more dainty. Like many other unconsidered but worthy customs, however, it must be stressed occasionally that our inventive powers may rise to the occasion. Here, as elsewhere, we must at intervals trouble the waters. The heavy soups and rich salads so enjoyed during the cold weather must take a rest in the spring. Something a bit different is gratefully hailed by the family.

Pimiento Cream is delicate and delectable. Measure and combine two cups of hot milk, and two cups of veal or chicken stock (bouillon cubes may be used for the latter). Place in the top of a double-boiler and heat well. Meanwhile, cream together four tablespoons of fat and three tablespoons of flour, and add two tablespoons of cold milk. Blend well and then add gradually to the mixture in the top of the double-boiler while stirring constantly. Meanwhile, measure one-half a small can of pimientos and press through a potato ricer. Add one teaspoonful of very finely grated onion, a speck of cayenne, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, and one-fourth teaspoonful of Tabasco sauce. Mix well and cream on top of each serving. Accompany with toast strips on which grated cheese has been melted.

For Golden Soup, scrape, slice and cook eight medium sized carrots until tender in boiling, salted water. Drain, reserving one cupful of the stock, and press the carrots through a potato ricer, or a puree strainer. Meanwhile, prepare one quart of thin, white sauce, using one quart of milk, four tablespoons of fat, four tablespoons of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper as a basis. Add the carrot puree, the reserved liquor, one teaspoonful of scraped onion, one-eighth teaspoonful of ginger, a dash of cayenne, and more salt, if necessary. Heat well and serve with a sprinkling of finely-chopped parsley on each serving.

Soup of Spring Vegetables is delightful for the main course of a luncheon, served with gingerbread and whipped cream for dessert. Prepare four medium sized carrots, one Bermuda onion, three stalks of celery, half a small parsnip and one small turnip, and put all through the coarse knife of the meat-chopper. Cook five minutes in three tablespoons of fat. Then add one cupful of strained tomato juice, two quarts of water, two cloves, half of a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of salt, one fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and a dash of cayenne. Cover and let simmer two hours. Then add three tablespoons of each of any left-over vegetables such as peas and string-beans. Add two tablespoons of minute tapioca and cook fifteen minutes, or until the tapioca is tender. Serve with croutons.

For Mushroom Soup, wash one-fourth pound of mushrooms and peel them. Reserve three mushrooms. Chop the remainder fine, add the skins, and simmer for half an hour in one cupful of bouillon to which one teaspoonful of onion has been added. Rub all through a fine strainer, and add one cup of cream and one small turnip, and put all through the coarse knife of the meat-chopper. Cook five minutes in three tablespoons of fat. Then add one cupful of strained tomato juice, two quarts of water, two cloves, half of a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of salt, one fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and a dash of cayenne. Cover and let simmer two hours. Then add three tablespoons of each of any left-over vegetables such as peas and string-beans. Add two tablespoons of minute tapioca and cook fifteen minutes, or until the tapioca is tender. Serve with croutons.

For Spinach Soup, wash one cupful of chopped and cooked new spinach through a potato ricer and puree strainer. Add two cups of strong chicken or veal stock, and one pint of thin white sauce. Heat well in the top of a double-boiler and pour gradually over one beaten egg-yolk which has been mixed with one-fourth cupful of cream. Whip with the egg-beater until smooth and creamy. Serve with a bit of whipped cream on top of each serving and accompany with crisp bread.

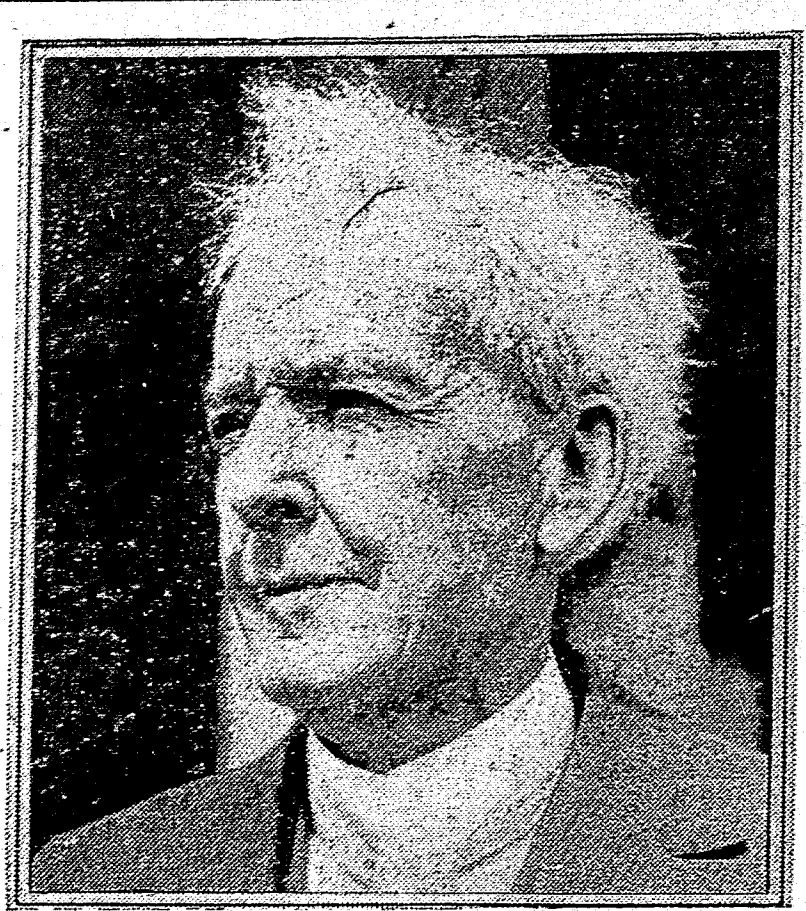

Luncheon Salad is excellent as a main course for a Sunday night supper or picnic meal. Cut large, very thin slices of ham and trim them into triangular shapes. Roll the triangles in cornucopia shapes and fasten them in shape with wooden toothpicks. Meanwhile, prepare a vegetable salad of sliced cooked potatoes, sliced beets, peas, or bite of corn, and dress with a mayonnaise dressing to which horseradish has been added in the proportion of one teaspoonful of horseradish to each cup of mayonnaise dressing. Fill each ham triangle with a spoonful of the vegetable salad and lay on bread or crisp crackers. Place a spoonful of dressing at the side. Serve with bread and butter.

Spring Salad is most tempting. Arrange beds of white, crisp lettuce on a shallow salad dish and cover with radish roses. Make small balls of both vegetable and cream cheese, and dip one side of the latter in finely minced parsley. Meanwhile, hard-boil two eggs and slice a border of them around the edge. Pour French Dressing over all and serve with crisp crackers.

For Salad Piquante, add one-fourth cupful of minced Roquefort cheese or snappy cheese, or grated mild American cheese to one-half cupful of highly flavored French Dressing. Add a dash of cayenne and one hard-boiled egg yolk tied. Arrange the lettuce nests on individual serving plates, place a spoonful of sliced chicken and celery in the center of each, and pour the dressing liberally over all. Garnish each with a ring of two or three hard-boiled egg whites, and a strip of pimiento.

For Salad Maitre, wash and skin five small tomatoes and slice half of them thinly into a salad bowl. Sprinkle the tomatoes with two small new onions and one green pepper minced fine, and cover each tomato with one teaspoonful of grated yellow cheese and put one teaspoonful of stiff mayonnaise in the middle of each. Top each tomato with a pimiento slice. Lardered cucumbers thoroughly chilled and sprinkled with highly seasoned French Dressing may be heaped in the center of this salad—Good House-keeping.

For an Invalid—My daughter, while sick in the hospital, said she wanted so many little things, but did not like to ring for a nurse to hand them to her. So I took a short shoe-bag, about fifteen inches deep and thirty inches wide, with four pockets stitched on, and filled this to the side of her bed toward the wall. She then had her brush and comb and toilet articles in one pocket, her glasses, note-book, fountain pen, handkerchiefs, and numerous other useful things in the other. This, she said, proved a real joy to her. The nurse thought it was a splendid idea that I am passing it on to others.
